

Go wild on a safari in your back garden

Parents, are you ready to take your little ones on a safari?

First you will need to find out all the wild animal soft toys that your children have and secretly hide them around the garden.

Place the animals in similar places to their natural habitats in the wild, for example, a monkey toy would be hidden in a tree, a fish or whale could be hidden by a pond or by a garden water tap.

Once the animals are in the wild, you must gather the explorers. Make sure they have appropriate clothing such as a hat to protect your little ones from the African sun.

Head out into the wild and go exploring. Once you find each animal see if your children know where they live in the wild, you could even explain why they live there.

We hope you enjoy your worldwide safari from your back garden.
